Promultis Object Recognition

Object recognition is the ability to drop an interactive puck onto the screen, and the screen to react to that object and display relevant content. A good example would be a shoe shop. You could place an interactive puck to the bottom of a shoe, and when the customer places that shoe on the screen, the screen would display a video, or pictures and a size guide of the shoe. (Software is required along with the screen – Check out www.promultis.info/immerse). The 100 touch points allow for a number of pucks to be used.
